This is why we decided to take a look at the TV history and highlight some tags that made TV a more representative, progressive and diversified place. LUCILLE BALL IN "I Love Lucy, in which your character was married to the real life of the husband Dessi Arnaz., broke a big TV taboo. When the actress was grateful, the couple thought the show, which was transmitted by a season in CBS, would be canceled or placed in hiatus until after it gave birth. The pregnancy of an actress nao it was always as easy as getting Kerry Washington from Scandal some fabulous coats. In the end, the pregnancy of the ball was written on the show, an approach that was used often on TV script from then on. Writers would have to avoid the word \tilde{A} a \in \pm a "first \tilde{A} - a \in ∞ He considered too vulgar for air. The episode where Lucy's pregnancy was announced in 1952. It was titled "Lucy is encountered" because it is apparently well refer to the word "P Â". The characters used verbal solutions like à ¢ â € ¬ "We are having a baby à â € ™ ¬ ¬ Å" they pressed â € "imply the state of Lucy. Nichelle Nichols and William Shatner in à ¢ â € ¬ ¬ ¬ ¬ ¬ € Airlate of the episode: November 22, 1968. Nichelle Nichols played Uhura, a Starfleet Lieutenant and Communications officer, making the show one of the first to present a black woman not portraying a servant. George Takei played Lieutenant Sulu, U.S.S. Helmsman from the company. Having a Japanese American actor in a role so visible only two days after World War II, a time defined by the anti-Asiótician politics and racism of America, also highlighted the compromise of the show Representation. Then there's the kiss. Uhura and Captain Kirk (William Shatner) kissed in an episode of 1968, while under the influence of alienas. You can argue if that was the first interracial kiss on the screen or not, but surely proved the dedication of the show to the representation of a plural and diversified society. And confirmed the famous words of Kirk: A ¢ a € ¢ ¬ Circuit 1975.: Getty Images This Sitcom Seven Season that aired between 1970 and 1977 broke some molds. He starred Mary Tyler Moore as Mary Richards, a single woman in her 30 years focused on her career in a TV station. The show was created by James L. Brooks and Allan Burns, but had a writers room where there was also a significant number of women, especially for the period. Trevia Silverman was a Of the first women hired as a writer for the show, and importantly he shared to get married. And although certain issues are not treated in the same way, directed, we accustomed to the last few days, the show made suggestions about Mary having an active sex life and taking the pitch.
