Examples for such events are changes in the battery state, or when the device expects a certain action from the user - for example pressing the button on the Ink Device. Note: To enter pairing mode on a Wacom SmartPad press and hold the button on the device for 6 seconds.* The constructor of the InkDeviceScanner takes one parameter: context. InkDeviceScanner inkDeviceScanner = new InkDeviceScanner(this); To start scanning for devices, call the scan() method of the InkDeviceScanner. } }); 5. Device Services There are certain things that a Wacom Ink Device can do but in most cases there are differences between one device and another. However, if a parameter is not supported by the current Ink Device it will be omitted. The benefits of using the CDL include: Less implementation effort for developers: integration of a single library gives support for a range of input devices The flexibility to include support for non-Wacom devices in an application The freedom to take full advantage of the Wacom Ink Technologies digital ink ecosystem to provide high quality digital ink rendering without sacrificing the value of raw pen data needed in processes such as signature verification A generic interface relieves the application code from direct control of the connected hardware Using the library you can: Search for available devices Connect to a device Receive input from a connected device in the WILL Ink format The CDL is available for a range of development platforms Windows (Classic and UWP) iOS Android Types of supported devices include: Wacom PHU-111 Clipboard Wacom Smartpad e.g. Folio, Slate Wacom Intuos Apple Pencil Regardless of the development platform and device type a consistent approach is provided for application development: Ink Device Manager Use the device manager to receive a list of named devices that are available for connection Ink Device Connect to a named device and retrieve properties Ink Service Use the Call back mechanism ¹ receive data from the connected device. If you have already paired with a device before there is no need to scan it again. }); 5.2. FileTransfer: Transfer Ink Device Files In this section³ we want to receive and preview all files created with the WACOM Ink Device. To do this, after making sure that the FileTransferDeviceService device is backed up by the current device, we must obtain its instance: FileTransferDeviceService FileTransferDeviceService = (FileTransferDeviceService) inkdevice.getdeviceservice (serviceType.file_transfer_device_service device); and enable it: FileTransferDeviceService.enable (new FileTransferCallback () { @Override Public Boolean OnFileTransferred (inkdocument inkdocument) { ... Then we are ready to get the instance of Livemodedeviceservice: livemodedeviceservice livemodedeviceservice = (livemodedeviceservice) inkdevice.getdeviceService (DevicesViceType. Live_mode_device_service); and enable it: livemodedeviceservice.enable (new livemodedcallback () { @Override Void Onstrokestart (pathchunk pathchunk) { ... UserActionCompleted: indicates that the user action requested above ³ completed (successfully or not). Subscribe to them so you can maintain proper communication ⁴ the InkDevice. To do this, create a new instance of InkDeviceScanner. EventDeviceService provides the means to subscribe to and receive events sent by the device. 3. To get the character sets of the currently connected Ink device, you can use the getAvailableDeviceServices() method, which returns a list of DeviceServiceTypes. Note that, unlike the previous two mÃ© all, it also provides as InkStroke, which contains the data describing the entire stroke. Devices must be in pairing mode to be found. In CDL, these features are grouped into sets called Device Services. However, Device Services such as EventDeviceService can work while another service is enabled.
