Alternatively, you can set android:height to 48dp or higher. If you're new to Android, check out our tutorials for Android. Size, colors and layouts are all things you can consider. Design for accessibility Here are things you can incorporate into the design of your apps to make it easier for all users to use. Add this to the FloatingAction button by using the id of the container that contains the quantity consumed as the value. Have you tried to add a cup of coffee with TalkBack enabled? In addition, add the android:focusableInTouchMode attribute with the value of a false icon, because you want it to be focusable only for the screen reader. When using the TalkBack tool, you may have noticed how difficult it was to get to the "Add Coffee" FloatingAction button. In a right-to-left language, the sliding directions are reversed. This includes someone who was born blind, or lost fine motor skills in an accident. It is a small way that you can improve people's lives. Download now so you can use it with this tutorial. You don't need to include that it's a button in your description. When Toasts are shown on the screen, they are announced when accessibility tools, such as TalkBack, are activated. When the cup is added, the value of the quantity consumed is changed along with the proportion of coffee in the cup of coffee. To specify that both elements should be in focus at the same time, add the android:focusable attribute with the sometimes true value of the parent element of the two, the LinearLayout with the consumedContainer id. Do this by adding the following line to your test or test runner. This is useful for visually impaired people who cannot see the screen well enough to understand what is there, Select what they need. MainActivity.kt canvas the Oncreate Amusement (SavedInstanceState: Bundle?) { // a e >a e > { coffenRepo.increment() showCount() amountConsumed.announceForAccessibility(getString(R.string.count_updated, consumedString())) } } strings.xml CoffeeOverflow Coffee Limit 5 Limit Amount Consumed %1$d of %2$s Add Coffee Count updated %s Try using TalkBack to increment the cups of coffee consumed with this update.
