My life for Aiur is the third episode of the seventh season StarCrafts OFA. And 'the thirty-fifth episode percent overall. Plot [] The episode begins with hellion led by crackhead who rushes to the green Protoss water for three-way alliance, while Bob Ragelot is a war speech to motivate his last remaining Protoss units to fight the red team a once and for all. The probe card accepts the list of the navy to form alliance, Bob grabs and tears in pieces, holding a grudge against his enemiesÀ anyone. He kicks and crackhead him flee. Crackhead decides to forget him. While the rest of the Protoss green water: stalker, warden, skilled and packaging of probes are listening, Bob makes a continuous noise, causing its units to cry for inspiration. Then signals to start the final war against his mortal enemy: Obnoxious performer. In the base of the red team, a red Hydralisk see an incoming attack detected on the watchtower. As you hear the siren, massive army of red marauders, stalkers, immortals, giants, Hydralisks, cockroaches and lurkers march toward Bob Ragelot team. Since © both opposite sides in contact with each other, the water green Protoss disappears in blue powder. The Red frustrated team realizes that it was a hallucination cast sentry all the time. Then, suddenly, a stasis department under them (expressed by Oracle out of the screen) is detonated, making the Red immobile. The strategy work for him, finally, smug Bob out of the bushes and rushes into the base of the Red team. The green water Protoss sabotage the base, and the Zealot punches, cuts, bumps and kicks the Red Zergling, Hydralisk, cockroaches and marine off to make his way to the red mother where the treacherous and Derpfestor performer browsing. He runs on the red link and jump to reach the mother ship. While it breaks through the bridge window, pointing the blade psi to kill Obnoxious performer. Derpfestor uses neural parasite on Bob's head. Suffering from mental control, the Bob Ragelot is pinned on the floor. He stands up, but he shakes violently to regain control of himself to be brainwashed Derpfestor, which led him to become red, and would become the new Proxy zealot. The flicker of him teal markings with red as the neural parasite attempts to corrupt the mind of him resisting. In Bob's point of view, that is looking victorious and Infestor performer through red vision warning. However, when he is strongly in accordance with him, he cries out his Warcry iconic and severed tentacle Derpfestor, getting rid of assimilation. He turns to Derpfestor revenge and charges him. Reacting attack zealot, he digs beneath the floor (cheating at the game), which makes yes that Bob to go to the glass, however, and falls to the ground full of red army surrounding mothership, after freeing the department stasis. With no one else to assist him, Bob the Ragelot suffers a devastating loss of guns, bullets, red laser siege tank and plugs in August He he went to pieces, once again, his psi blade closes down, and he bleeds blue. I him his sight faded blacks, he whispers his last words: "My life for Aiur" The characters [] Bob the Ragelot Probes Hellion Crackhead Stalkers Sentry Adept Immortal Red Team [] Trivia [] The title of this episode is based on the citation of the zealot warp-in, "My life for Aiur!" both in the original StarCraft and StarCraft II. mental Derpfestor again controls a fanatic from "4 NASL Grand Finals". This is the third time the Derpfestor neural parasite is cut off. First it was done by slaves in the SCV "Alliance Part 3" and the second Patchling in "Deep Trouble Part 3". This is the first time that Bob Ragelot deals With Derpfester, even if he did in "Inchage" on the purple Derppstor. This is a final aspect of the Ragelot as a zealot-long-time character since his first back appearance "supplied block" until the final "GG No King" series returns to him. He does not appear to end the background as well and in subsequent episodes.
