Instructables is a community for people who like to make things. Come explore, share, and make your next project with us! We're all familiar with professional websites and e-commerce portals, but a website doesn't have to be all business. It's easy to create a personal website where you can explore your interests, share your feelings, or update loved ones on your family life. Here's a look at getting started with a personal website along with some topic ideas. The terms "blog," "personal website," and even "online diary" are sometimes used interchangeably. How you refer to your platform is largely about the subject matter, whether you want an audience, and how it's hosted. Your personal website can be about anything you want, including hobbies, pets, or other interests. It can be a family website that shares your adventures with loved ones along with an area for comments and discussion. If you're an author, your personal website can be a platform to get feedback on story ideas or book rough drafts. Dedicate a personal website to sharing how you're getting through a difficult experience in life, or add an e-commerce element to showcase handmade jewelry or other creative ventures. There's no wrong topic idea for your personal website. Once you decide what you'd like to dedicate your site to, find an appropriate host. For example, a blogging platform would be perfect for a simple online journal-style website, while attaching e-commerce functionality would require a more full-featured web host. There are many excellent free website platforms with varying features. Here are a few favorites.

About.me is a personal web-hosting service that lets you showcase who you are and what you like to do, allowing people to have a quick peek into your personality. About.me also offers domain names, so you can choose one that fits your theme. You'll need to connect your new domain name to another hosting provider if you don't wish to use About.me as your sole provider. WordPress.com provides a similar option, offering domains and design themes. Both services allow you to share your thoughts and being useful. WordPress is another great option for a blog-style personal website or a more complicated setup. Creating a professional, sophisticated website in minutes with a variety of themes and functions. WordPress is easy to use with more advanced web design features if you want to dig deeper into how their sites work. WordPress has a free service option as well as a number of premium subscription options. If you may venture into e-commerce with your personal website, Squarespace is a great option, although it's not free. Beautiful pre-built templates and drag-and-drop functionality make web design an intuitive, if not easy, process. Blogger is one of the easiest and fastest blog-creation tools around. It's free to use, the content creation interface is easy, and all you need is a free Google account to set up your blog. Tumblr blogs are a great choice if you're visualizing a website with online communities and content curation. You'll be showing off your passions and projects with multimedia posts in no time. Google Sites is a fantastic, easy website-creation tool. If you have a Google account, you have access to Google Sites' straightforward drag-and-drop site builder. Create pages and easily add text, graphics, or video. It's easy to integrate content from other Google services, notably documents, spreadsheets, or other items from Docs. DJV / Getty Images

For those of Asian descent looking for a date, love, or just connecting online, there's sure to be a site here for you. While most don't offer as many features as the most widely-known top dating sites, all seven sites focus entirely on people in Asia or those who want to date someone Asian. Unless otherwise mentioned, each site expressly supports interracial relationships, and, when noted, also supports LGBTQ+ relationships, polyamory, and/or focuses entirely on marriage-minded singles.

Asian Date Net Asian Date Net (formerly Asia Funs) offers more than the standard fare, such as dating blogs, couples dating, and dating news. They also have a fun, constantly-changing ticker along the bottom of its main page, showing logged-in users and chat status updates. Their search engine finds a fair amount of potential matches based on location and age range. Users must be over 18 years old to register. Estimated total members: 7 million. Year founded: Unknown. Free membership includes unlimited messaging; Premium memberships include additional features.

SinglesDate SinglesDate is the largest, most popular Asian dating site in North America, serving millions of single Asians seeking romance. It's not only one of the most attractive sites of its kind to look at, however, there's one caveat: The site does not cater specifically to Asian singles (anyone can join). However, we believe they allow you to filter by race, so it's hard to beat it for the sheer number of members. Cost: Varies according to membership Number of Members: Estimated to be several million Type of dating site: Asian, casual, long-term Year Started: 2003 AsianDating.com AsianDating (formerly Asian Euro) is the main Asian-focused site for Cupid Media network. What is unique about this network is that it serves a user database with several dozen other niche dating sites, such as ChineseLoveLinks, FilipinaHeart, JapanCupid, SingaporeLoveLinks, ThaiLoveLinks, and VietnamCupid. It's available in six different languages (although the only Asian language is Japanese). It is by far the most attractive site that we have found, as well as the site with the highest confirmed Asian user base, making it a good choice if you don't mind the cost. Cost: $19.99/month + longer, depending on length of time signed up for Number of members: 2.5 million Type of dating site: Asian, casual, long-term relationships Year started: Unknown for AsianDating, but Cupid Media started in 1999 SuccessfulMatch Another company that ties into a larger database (Successful Match), Asian Women Date (formerly Asian Chats) has a few unique features that few other Asian dating sites offer, such as greeting cards, news relevant to Asians, and several verification options to allow users to prove their income, age, education, and occupation. What really makes this site stand out is the focus on interracial, heterosexual relationships only: Asian women and non-Asian men. Cost: Free to sign up Number of members: "Thousands" according to the homepage Type of dating site: Asian, Interracial, heterosexual Year started: Unsure, however, SuccessfulMatch started in 2001

AsiansD Asians 4 Asians is a UK-based site featuring profiles exclusively for Hindu, Sikh, Muslim, and Indian singles. However, there are fewer single members on this site compared to most of the websites on this list. Having said that, it is also one of the most inclusive options, and the profiles are regarded as authentic and honest. It's not a bad idea to check it out before ruling it out completely. But keep in mind that this site is geared toward British residents. Free membership allows limited communication; Premium memberships provide more extensive features. Estimated total members: 35,000. Year founded: Unknown. Free membership includes limited messaging; Premium memberships include additional features.

The oldest Asian dating companies were founding Cherry Blossoms offers singles a way to meet Asians who are looking for love, romance, and marriage. The site openly states they've matched more than 100,000 happy couples and that they assist their clients with legal and visa support, if necessary. However, you'll notice very quickly most of the members are female and Philippino. However, there are also women from Thailand, China, Malaysia, and other Asian countries. Cost: $29.95/month or less, depending on length of time purchased Number of members: Uncertain Type of dating site: Asian, Interracial, marriage-minded Year dated: 1974, as a photo catalog how do you cite a website in apa with no date
