That's the situation with Dak Prescott ahead of the Cowboys-Vikings Week 8 showdown. Nervous Prescott owners will undoubtedly be feverishly checking for injury updates throughout the day on Sunday, and we'll be here with the latest news on whether Dallas backup Cooper Rush or Prescott is playing so you feel comfortable when making your fantasy start 'em, sit 'em decisions. We'll continue to update this article with news on Prescott up until the official active/inactive report comes out on Sunday around 6:50 p.m. ET. MORE SNF: DK Showdown lineup | FD single game lineup Is Dak Prescott playing on Sunday night? UPDATE: Cowboys beat write Michael Gehlken reported Saturday night that it would "surprise many close to the situation" if Prescott started on Sunday night. UPDATE 2: ESPN's Adam Schefter reported Sunday morning that Prescott's status for Sunday night is "still up in the air." UPDATE 3: Prescott is officially OUT. Prescott originally injured his calf on the last play of Week 6. At the time, it wasn't considered too serious, but after a bye and week of limited practices, Prescott is reportedly a legit game-time decision for Sunday night's game against Minnesota. WEEK 8 PPR RANKINGS: Quarterback | Running back | Wide receiver | Tight end | D/ST | Kicker Obviously, this is a worst-case scenario for fantasy owners. The other prime-time QB options are Kirk Cousins, Daniel Jones, and Patrick Mahomes. Cousins and Mahomes are both heavily owned in virtually all leagues, and Jones, despite being 39-percent owned in Yahoo leagues, certainly wouldn't be available in most 12-team leagues. If none are available, the other QB you could try is Cowboys backup Cooper Rush. Even with all of Dallas's impressive offensive weapons, Rush would be a suboptimal play. WEEK 8 STANDARD RANKINGS: Quarterback | Running back | Wide receiver | Tight end | D/ST | Kicker At this point, it's tough to recommend waiting for Prescott, but if you do, make sure you have Jones or Rush ready to sub in. Quarterback is too high scoring of a position at which to take a zero. Even Rush should be able to get you 10 points, at the very least. WEEK 8 FANTASY: Sleepers | Busts | Start 'em, sit 'em If Dak is active, his outlook is a little lower than usual, as he will probably run even less than he's already been doing this year. Still, most of his points have come through the air, and if he's playing, clearly the Cowboys are going to let him fly. Ultimately, Prescott owners are taking a risk no matter what they do, so assess your situation and figure out what makes sense. If Prescott is out, downgrade Cowboys receivers CeeDee Lamb and Amari Cooper, but both should still be in lineups. Dalton Schultz is riskier, but Ezekiel Elliott and Tony Pollard will be leaned on even more. Nov 10, 2019; Arlington, TX, USA; Dallas Cowboys quarterback Dak Prescott (4) is sacked by Minnesota Vikings defensive end Everson Griffen (97) in the second quarter at AT&T Stadium. Mandatory Credit: Tim Heitman-USA TODAY Sports Week 8 has arrived and the Minnesota Vikings are faced with the spooky task of taking on the Dallas Cowboys on Halloween night. The Sunday Night Football matchup will be a hard-fought game and one that should be very entertaining for viewers.Both Minnesota and Dallas are good teams that were in the playoff picture heading into Week 8 of the season. They both could use every available player who could make an impact on the game to be available.Here are the players designated with injury statuses according to the official website of the Vikings:Minnesota VikingsOUTMichael Pierce, DT - elbow/shoulderDOUBTFULPatrick Jones II, DE - kneeQUESTIONABLEDede Westbrook, WR - ankleMichael Pierce will miss his third straight game on Halloween and there haven't been many good rumblings about his situation getting better. However, Armon Watts has done a good job of filling in for Pierce and should be able to hold his own against Dallas.Since Stephen Weatherly was traded, having Patrick Jones II doubtful is a little bit of a blow. Thankfully, the Vikings have a lot of talented young pass rushers who can fill in if needed and should be able to get some results.As the team's primary punt returner, Dede Westbrook has a role in Minnesota's special teams but hasn't been too involved in the offense. Still, if he can't go, that means the Vikings may have to put TE Chris Herndon on the field or look to either Ihmir Smith-Marsette or Dan Chisena if they want to go five wide.Tight end Ben Ellefson isn't on the list anymore because he was placed on injured reserve.Dallas CowboysQUESTIONABLE Dorance Armstrong, DE - ankleDak Prescott, QB - calfTyron Smith, OT - ankleThe good news for Dallas is that they have nobody ruled out or doubtful heading into this game. The bad news is that two of their most important players on offense are a bit banged up at the moment.Dak Prescott will likely know sometimes on Saturday if he will play on Sunday Night Football. If he can't, backup Cooper Rush will likely get the nod in his place.On the other hand, Tyron Smith is the Cowboys' starting left tackle and will be going up against a revitalized Everson Griffen if he is able to play. Griffen is known for having a huge motor and could present a problem for a banged-up Smith or a backup.*No players were listed as out or doubtful for the Cowboys.3 players the Vikings could trade before the 2021 deadlineWhich players will have the biggest impact on this game between the Minnesota Vikings and Dallas Cowboys if they are unable to play? And what scares you the most about this Halloween night clash? Tell us your thoughts in the comments. Arguably two of the Dallas Cowboys three most important players find themselves listed as questionable on the final Week 8 injury report ahead of the Week 8 matchup. Left tackle Tyron Smith and quarterback Dak Prescott both find themselves listed as 50/50 chances to suit up against the Minnesota Vikings, with Prescott being labeled a true game-time decision. It was believed Prescott's status would be determined during Saturday's final practice, but the team has decided to wait until warmups on Sunday night to make the decision. The MVP candidate's toughness and competitiveness are well documented, but the Cowboys coaches, front office, and even Prescott himself have acknowledged they must look at the big picture of the season and how important it is that this calf issue does not linger. Fourth-year Central Michigan product Cooper Rush would be the Cowboys' starter should the team err on the side of caution. The Vikings will be without defensive tackle Michael Pierce for the third consecutive week. Defensive end Patrick Jones II, a third-round pick, was battling to take over the snaps vacated after Minnesota traded out Stephen Weatherly, but it appears those will go to Kenny Willekes with Jones being listed as doubtful. As for Smith, the All-Pro bookend popped up on the injury report ahead of Week 6 with a neck issue, an injury he had surgery on in the offseason, and rolled his ankle against New England. Smith said he "feels great," and is expected to play Sunday. Defensive end Dorance Armstrong is the third questionable Cowboy this week as he was limited in practice all week. Armstrong hasn't played since injuring his ankle in Week 2. Through two games Armstrong looked much improved, and he began carving out his role in the defensive line rotation. Defensive tackle Brent Urban (triceps) and Maurice Canady (concussion) were added to the injured reserve, while cornerback Kelvin Joseph were activated from the list on Saturday. Gallup is dealing with a calf strain, like Prescott, and while he hasn't been activated from IR, he was designated to return, opening up a 21-day practice window. Cowboys VP Stephen Jones said Gallup's return is "right around the corner." Joseph came back to practice this week after injuring his groin in the team's final exhibition contest, the second-round rookie is set to make his NFL debut Sunday. Dallas also gets the services of La'el Collins back this week following his five-game suspension, though Terence Steele will continue to start at the right tackle after playing well in Collins absence. Collins is backing up both right tackle and Connor Williams at left guard, Collins' position his first two years in the league.
